Hi Mathieu. We talked about this on Instagram earlier. As I mentioned, I'm currently researching and working on unregulated practices of spatial reappropriation and physical displacement—the main topic of my doctoral thesis. I've been aware of your work for some time, and I would love to incorporate it into my research. That's why I suggested having an informal interview or discussion to explore this topic further.

Here are some questions or key points:

Could you tell us a little about yourselves? A brief introduction about how this duo formed and what your intentions were?

Can you tell us a bit about your interventions? How did you start doing them and why?

Technological advancements seem to considerably increase the tactical and expressive possibilities of unregulated practices, but at the same time, they also expand the tactical capabilities of control and security systems. How do you see this situation? How do you approach it?

Do you feel that certain spaces in the city invite or encourage you to carry out interventions there? Which spaces in the city would you highlight and why?

Have there been any unregulated practices that have allowed you to experience the city in a different way than usual?

What message are you trying to convey with your work?

Is there anything else you want to add?

Thank you very much for helping me with this.

Juan
